Latest Release of Industry-Leading Content Conversion and Deployment Platform Improves on Popular Features

AUSTIN, Texas — January 28, 2010 — WebWorks.com, a brand of Quadralay Corporation, the leading developer of content conversion and deployment solutions for single and multi-source delivery of online content, today announced the 2009.4 release of its industry-leading ePublisher platform.

The 2009.4 release represents the culmination of the 2009 development cycle and both incorporates and improves on features and functions launched over the last year, including such highlights as:

- PDF XSL-FO support for tight control of print and online publishing
- Support for FrameMaker 9.0 input
- Publishing to the Confluence wiki platform
- Documentation feedback
- Innovative new licensing technology.

2009.4 also includes full security patches for projects developed in all currently supported versions of ePublisher, and full backwards compatibility.

ePublisher supports input from all versions of FrameMaker from version 6 upwards as well as input from Microsoft Word (up to and including Word 2007), and any DITA-XML compliant editor. Output to over 15 different delivery formats is available.

Existing WebWorks customers with active maintenance or subscription contracts will be automatically shipped a copy of ePublisher 2009.4 at no additional cost.
