WebWorks.com Adds Eclipse Help Publishing to Industry-Leading ePublisher Platform

Leading Publishing Platform Software Developer Brings Automated Publishing to the Eclipse Community

AUSTIN, Texas — July 17, 2008 — WebWorks.com, a brand of Quadralay Corporation, the leading developer of publishing platform solutions for single-source delivery of online content, today announced the SUMMER 2008 release of its industry-leading ePublisher platform.

Leading the list of new features for this release is the addition of Eclipse Help as an output format. By leveraging the established power and automated processes of the ePublisher Platform, companies developing products based on the fast-growing Eclipse platform, such as the Eclipse IDE, can now produce high-quality online documentation and Web-based info-centers with just a few clicks.

The ePublisher SUMMER release includes what is believed to be an industry-first automated process for previewing Eclipse Help before it is deployed. This new process saves time, improves quality and reduces the time to market for products based on the Eclipse platform by ensuring that the product documentation and help systems can stay in sync throughout an agile product development cycle.

“We are very excited to be bringing the power of the ePublisher Platform to the Eclipse development community,” said Ben Allums, WebWorks Director of Engineering. “This latest release is further confirmation of how the WebWorks agile enterprise publishing model can benefit new sectors of the market.”
